

My internship report

At Domino's

Every morning I had to do the preparation that means cutting the veggies for the next day. It was hard to do the same thing every morning but it was funny. After the preparation I had to clean the room together with a colleague of mine. I ate pizza everyday; it was so great and tasty. Every day I tried something new. After cleaning the room and eating pizza I had to deliver food to the people with an e-bike. The e-bikes were great and funny. My boss is/was a great one. I must say that he is/was really strict but it was/is okay. The one who made the pizzas called Salvatore became a good friend of mine in 3 weeks. He is Italian and can't speak German so well. I helped him to speak better German and he taught me how to make pizza, salads, desserts and some sauces. We laughed a lot. It was a great experience. I've learned at domino's that the most important thing is how to work in a team and with other people you didn't know before. There it is/was like a big family. Everyone helped each other. At the end of the day I had to clean the room again. It was exhausting but I was happy that I could go after cleaning the room. Domino's has a strange system. Every pizza has a different style. We had to make the pizzas weighing the ingredients separately. For example pizza tuna: The medium size has 500g. 300g dough, 100g tomato sauce, 50g tuna and 50g of cheese. Everything has a strict order. The most important thing is/was to look for the hygiene. Everything you did in the kitchen was with gloves. It was annoying to put the gloves on and off 5 times in one hour but hygiene is so important in a restaurant. Personally, I think that it is better to do your internship in a place where you have to do something and learn about life. With a lawyer or engineer you have to make coffee or to press some sheets. In a restaurant you learn about the important things in life: teamwork, helping each other, taking responsibility. I saw that they needed me and that I was a part of the team. Finally I can say that it was a great experience and great 3 weeks.:)

Summary

What you need: When you work at Domino's you need to be ready to work with people you didn't know before and to take responsibility.

What I learned: I learned how to make pizza, salads, desserts and sauces. I also learned how to clean a kitchen properly. I learn how to work in a team and communicate with each other. At the same time I learn to take responsibility what was/is an big progress for me.

My recommendation: I would recommend an internship at Domino's because you have to do something and can learn so much about life and how to work with other people. You are included in everything they do and it's a great feeling to know that someone needs you.
